NATION'S FIRST all-steel panelized track sections for rail transportation have been developed for quick installation as units, eliminating conventional methods of assembling track with wood or concrete ties. Designed primarily for rail sidings and other industrial applications, the Fastrak sections are available as ready-to-place units. Here, a forklift handles a panel at Houston, Tex.

Albert to Quit in Eight Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Carl Albert, the new speaker of the House, says he plans to retire from politics within eight years and spend his old age in Bug Tussle, Okla., the tiny community where he was reared.

Albert, 62, gave this preview of his plans in an interview with WKY radio of Oklahoma City Thursday.

"I've always planned to retire there," he said. "No place has ever been home to me except Bug Tussle. I don't plan to stay here until I'm 70 years old."

Molecules of Memory Are Transferred

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — A scientist at Baylor College of Medicine says a molecule capable of transferring memory from one rat to another has been synthesized.

Dr. Georges Ungar said Thursday artificial reproduction of the memory molecule opens the door to unlocking the complex chemical language of learning.

He said that although he has used the memory transfer method only in rats he is "fairly certain" the same principle will work in man.

He said how soon the technique might be applied to humans will depend largely on how rapidly his research team gets "badly needed" funds.

Ungar, 64, a native of Hungary and professor of pharmacology in the anesthesiology department at Baylor, has been working on the memory molecule project almost three years.

He said the artificial substance is identical to a naturally occurring molecule responsible for memory transfer from one animal to another. He said it is less expensive and easier to make than to extract the natural molecule.

In his experiments, Ungar trained rats and mice to fear darkness although they normally seek dark places and are active at night.

This was accomplished by administering an electric shock each time the animals entered a darkened box. After a week of such shocks, Ungar extracted the brains of the animals and isolated the molecule associated with the induced response.

"The substance, injected into the bodies of mice which had never been subjected to such electric shocks, caused them to manifest the same fear of darkness," he said.

Johnson Wears a Hearing Aid

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Former President Lyndon B. Johnson has showed up with a hearing aid which he does not care to hear about.

He wore the device, attached to his glasses, at the dedication of a building at the University of Texas Thursday.

"How do you like the hearing aid?" a newsman asked.

"Mighty good to see you," was Johnson's reply.

Environmental Plans Would Be Previewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Council on Environmental Quality has proposed giving the public an unprecedented over-the-shoulder preview of any government actions that might threaten the environment.

The council would require federal agencies to disclose the environmental impact of their administrative actions or legislative proposals at least 15 days before any public hearings and 90 days before putting them into effect.

Citizen groups have already won court orders blocking federal projects that lacked the impact statements, under present, more limited guidelines.

The council's new guidelines, due for publication Monday but obtained today by the Associated Press, are expected to take effect after a 45-day comment period.

They mark the culmination of a review by the Council and Congress, touched off by an AP report last November that agencies were not required to reveal their impact statements until they had already decided what action they would take.

Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., elicited confirmation from Council Chairman Russell E. Train, in hearings by his House subcommittee on fisheries and wildlife conservation.

Dingell termed that interpretation of the law requiring environmental impact statements—which he had authored—"completely inconsistent with the clear language of the statute."

A Council spokesman said Dingell has praised the proposed new guidelines.

As written, the Environmental Policy Act of 1969 requires agencies to submit to the President and the council environmental impact statements on appropriate actions and proposals, and to make them public.

The council, backed by presidential authority, told the agencies last April they must prepare a draft impact statement, obtain other agencies' comments, and then prepare a final statement.

But agencies were not required to make public anything but the final statement—and that, whenever they pleased.

Among other things, guidelines require:

- Impact statements and comments on legislative proposals must be made public "at the time they are furnished to Congress."
- That must be "in advance of any relevant congressional hearings."
- In proposals for administrative action, draft impact statements must be made public at the same time they go to the Council.
- Proposals must be delayed for at least the next 90 days.
- Comments from other agencies become public as they, too, reach the council.
- If public hearings on the proposals are to be held, the draft impact statement must be made public at least 15 days before and.

Congressional Battle on Rules Start

By JOHN BECKLER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The problem of the 91st Congress was to adjourn. For the 92nd, at least in the house, it is getting started.

Moments after the friendly greetings of returning members subsided, after the television lights faded, after new Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., declared "we must not flounder," the House floundered.

The simple routine of opening a new Congress—electing officers and adopting rules—became an unmanageable problem and was finally abandoned in favor of new try today.

The Thursday breakdown came when Republicans learned belatedly rules they were being asked to adopt would deprive them of $1.5 million in committee funds they had been guaranteed.

The guarantee, contained in the Reorganization Act passed last year, gave the Republicans one-third of the committees' investigative staff funds.

The provision was put in on the floor last year by a bipartisan reform coalition over the opposition of the committee chairmen.

It was removed Wednesday in the secrecy of the Democratic caucus. To guard against having it restored on the floor, the caucus took a step unprecedented in modern times and bound all Democrats to support the caucus position.

That was the situation the Republicans found themselves in when called on to approve the rules as amended by the Democratic caucus.

When they learned what had been done, particularly that all Democrats were bound to support the action, incensed Republicans demanded the presence of a quorum—218 members—and the day that began with the bright promise of a new era degenerated into a dreary round of roll calls. With the reception, luncheons and other parties that always mark opening day on Capitol Hill, it was impossible to keep a quorum present. And Albert finally called for adjournment, leaving the rules unadopted.

The provision eliminated by the Democrats would have allowed Republicans to control the share they get from committee funds. At present, Democrats control the money and through their committee chairmen negotiate with the ranking GOP committee members to determine what the minority party will get.

More Sheep in Utah Die Mysteriously

GARRISON, Utah (AP) — More than 1,250 sheep have died mysteriously on a remote range in western Utah 150 miles from a grazing area where thousands of the animals were killed by Army nerve gas in 1968.

Guesses on the cause included another nerve gas mishap, radioactive dust thrown up by a nuclear test last month, and the effects of a noxious plant known as loco weed. Laboratory tests continued through the night at Utah State University.

A herder said the sheep toppled and died Thursday with blood pouring from their noses. Many of the survivors in a herd of 2,400 appeared to be dying.

The Atomic Energy Commission and the Army both denied responsibility.

It was nerve gas from an aerial test at the Army's top secret Dugway Proving Ground that caused the 1968 kill of 6,400 sheep at Skull Valley. The Army at first denied that nerve gas was the lethal agent, but later admitted the aerial test was to blame.

"We don't want another Skull Valley, where it took two years to get the information to the public," Gov. Calvin L. Rampton declared.

"I do not want speculation to cause panic, worry or apprehension."

Rampton said initial reports by state investigators indicated "the sheep died of something they ate."

"I think it is unlikely the deaths are linked to the AEC, but you can't rule out the possibility," Rampton said. "It is unlikely the sheep would have died in one night if the cause was radiation."

Rampton also said he didn't think chemical or biological warfare testing at Dugway could have been responsible because prevailing winds have been blowing the wrong way for several days.

Garrison also is about 150 miles from the Atomic Energy Commission's nuclear test site at Mercury, Nev. An underground test there last Dec. 18 ruptured the earth's surface, sending a cloud of radioactive dust across Utah.

The AEC said only minute traces of radiation had been found at Garrison.

The Army said it hasn't conducted any open-air tests of chemical or biological agents at Dugway since 1969.

Loco weed, also known as halogeton, is widely found on western ranges. It can be lethal to grazing animals because of its high concentration of oxalate, a substance which prevents the normal coagulation of the blood.

The dead and dying sheep belong to Clarence Ingram & Sons, Inc., of Nephi, Utah.

"The sheep were all right when I went to bed Wednesday," said Greg Llewellyn, 63, who was tending the flock.

"When I got up, hundreds of them were dead. One minute a sheep would be standing, the next it would topple over and die, blood streaming from its nose."

Another Jet Hijacked to Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — Forcing his demands with a hatchet and a bomb threat, a tall young man who never lost his cool hijacked a Northwest Airlines jetliner Friday. He wanted to go to Algeria but wound up instead in Cuba with a stop in Detroit.

He agreed on Havana after the captain of the three-engine Boeing 727, on a scheduled flight from Milwaukee to Washington with 59 persons aboard, told the hijacker the aircraft could not make the long hop to Algeria.

The youth boarded the Northwest flight in Milwaukee and shortly after takeoff trotted the length of the passenger compartment waving a short-handled ax and carrying a brown briefcase, which he said contained a bomb.

"I saw he had a hatchet and I went to take it from him," stewardess Darlene Luther of Moorhead, Minn., said Friday night after the jet returned to Miami from the Cuban capital. "He told me: 'Just don't touch. Everyone will be all right. I want to go to Algeria.'"

When another stewardess, Caroline Aulwes, relayed the demand by interphone to Capt. Fred Wolter, Wolter told the hijacker the plane was not equipped for a transatlantic flight. Wolter suggested that they make Havana their destination and the hijacker replied: "All right."

The plane made a refueling stop in Detroit, but the hijacker allowed no one to enplane or disembark. Gov. William G. Milliken of Michigan had been scheduled to board the flight there for Washington.

The plane flew on to Havana, where four armed soldiers climbed aboard and escorted the hijacker from the jet.

"He gave them the ax but kept the briefcase," passenger Howard Liberty of Essex Junction, Vt., said. "Then they all drove off in a car."

"He scared the hell out of all of us when he trotted down that aisle waving that brand new hatchet," said Mike Passarella of Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., one of the passengers.

Crew members said there was no sky marshal aboard the plane, as far as they knew.

The hijacker had a one-way ticket from Milwaukee to Detroit marked: "No contact, no phone." He was identified tentatively by FBI agents as Gerald Grant.

Ex-Agents Say Army Spied on Students

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Former Army intelligence agents say they spied on student political meetings addressed by such liberals as Sen. Walter Mondale and ex-ambassador John Kenneth Galbraith.

The recently discharged agents say they took note of what the speakers said and described crowd reaction in reports to Army Intelligence Command headquarters at Ft. Holabird, Md.

All six former agents interviewed by The Associated Press said they did not consider the surveillance of civilian meetings as assignments to spy personally on Mondale and Galbraith.

But one agent said when he protested the propriety of the snooping, his commanding officer in the 113th Military Intelligence regional headquarters here said: "You are ordered to go."

Sen. Ellender Takes Over Russell's Post

By GORDON BROWN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Allen J. Ellender, tough and hard-working at 80 as he was when he took his Senate seat 34 years ago, assumes command of the all-powerful, prestigious Senate Appropriations Committee with the death of Sen. Richard Russell.

The Louisiana Democrat also becomes senior member of the Senate, a body where seniority is equated with power and esteem, and as such assumes the honorary post of president pro tem. This makes him third in line for the presidency behind the vice president and speaker of the House.

Russell, the Georgia Democrat who died Thursday at the age of 73, held both positions.

"The best tonic for aging," said Ellender on his 80th birthday, "is enthusiasm and always thinking of the future and tough discipline."

To give muscle to that credo, Ellender already has announced he intends to run for a seventh term in 1972, with the still longer-range plan of surpassing Arizona Democrat Carl Hayden's all-time record of 42 years and 9 months.

Ellender is not likely to be the power that Russell was in the Senate for the past two decades. But he will bring a unique style to the Appropriations chairmanship.

In a day when the growth of senatorial duties has forced many senators to rely heavily on burgeoning staffs, Ellender remains an old-fashioned legislator. He runs long hours of hearings himself and does his own on-the-scene investigating around the world.

Unlike Russell, who supported major presidential decisions in the foreign and defense fields, Ellender has long favored curbs on defense spending and presents a distinctly mixed record on recent national security issues.

He opposed Senate efforts to limit presidential power in Southeast Asia but favors a cut-back in U.S. forces in Europe. He voted against the Safeguard antiballistic missile but supports the supersonic transport likely the first major issue to come before his committee this year.

The 5-foot-4 Ellender was majority leader and speaker of the Louisiana House of Representatives in the late 1920s and early 1930s, the days of Huey P. Long.

One of the fabled Kingfish's closest advisers, Ellender was elected to Long's Senate seat a year after his 1935 assassination.

As chairman of the Agriculture Committee since 1951, Ellender has left his imprint on much farm legislation over the years. He was author of the original School Lunch Act.

Reactions to Nixon's Address

By EDMOND LeBRETON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's State of the Union address has met a mixed Capitol Hill reaction, leaving strong doubts the Democratic-controlled Congress will ever come close to writing into law all the chief executive asked in the name of a "new American Revolution."

In his third State of the Union address, the President outlined a program for a joint session of Congress Friday night calling for a surprisingly costly federal-state revenue sharing plan, guaranteed medical care for the poor and a sweeping reorganization of the government's executive branch.

The offer to make available $16 billion in federal funds—including $6 billion in new money—to states and localities, a huge jump over earlier estimates, produced expressions of shock from many Democrats and some head-shaking among Republicans.

The President's "program to insure that no American family will be prevented from obtaining basic medical care by inability to pay" was better received.

Sentiment for a national health plan has been growing among the lawmakers. But some took a wait and see attitude, since Nixon left details for a future message. Lawmakers who commented generally liked his call for a $100 million drive to find a cancer cure. However, Democrats greeted his endorsement of more aid to medical schools and measures to increase the doctor supply with complaints that he has vetoed legislation along these lines.

And there was much skepticism that the ramified executive agencies could be swept into eight major departments, instead of the present 12.

Although Nixon said he will discuss foreign policy later, he got a notable burst of applause in the midst of a generally tepid reception when he invited the 92nd Congress to be recorded as the one that "helped us end the longest war in the nation's history."

His other major proposals in the 4,500-word address carried live over network radio and television were for welfare reform, stalled in the last Congress, an expansionary budget to stimulate the economy and proposals to check pollution and noise and to expand the nation's parks.

"Let us put the money where the needs are," Nixon said as he unfolded a two-part program to help states and local governments to a generous share of the tax revenues taken in by the national government.

The plan would provide $5 billion a year to the local units, on a formula based on population and their own tax efforts, to use as they saw fit.

Another $11 billion would be provided for local programs in six broad fields—urban development, rural development, education, transportation, job training and law enforcement.

But of the $11 billion, only $1 billion would be new federal money, while the other $10 billion would be provided out of allocations already being made under specific federal aid programs in these areas.

House Ways and Means Committee hearings have been promised for later in the year by Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark. But Mills has adamantly opposed revenue sharing, both in principle and as an impossible dream while the government faces deficits of $15 billion or more.

The senior Republican member of the committee, Rep. John W. Byrnes of Wisconsin, has said he considers revenue sharing a dangerous innovation that could lead to more dependence on the federal government, rather than more freedom, for the states.

1970—Heathcliff (Timothy Dalton) and Cathy (Anna Calder-Marshall).

1939—Heathcliff (Laurence Olivier) and Cathy (Merle Oberon).

"Heathcliff!"—Catherine's desolate cry from the heart still echoes over the Yorkshire moors. A new film based on Emily Bronte's classic, "Wuthering Heights," has been made in Yorkshire in the authentic setting of the 19th century novel, and it brings up interesting points of comparison with the original Hollywood version made in 1939.

The earlier film was made on Joel McCrea's Los Angeles ranch. Laurence Olivier and Merle Oberon played Heathcliff and Catherine—dramatic roles which made them into international stars.

These much-coveted roles have now again been taken by two young, gifted "unknowns," Timothy Dalton and Anna Calder-Marshall. Dalton, 23 years old, has a look of the young Sir Laurence. But he avoided seeing the earlier film so that his own interpretation would not be influenced by Sir Laurence's. He's already had three screen roles, in "The Lion in Winter," "Cromwell" and "The Voyer." Miss Calder-Marshall, at age 22, had previously scored a great success on television in "Male of the Species"—her acting in that won her an Emmy award.

Director Robert Fuest says his film is almost as much about the moors as about the young lovers. The wild landscapes are used as a complement, and a magnificent, brooding accompaniment, to the passionate and tragic story of Heathcliff and Cathy. Although there's an emphasis on the youth and rebelliousness of the young lovers, however, Fuest feels that "the central situation of the book is so basic and universal that it should have some appeal for everyone, even the ones who remember the Olivier version."

The cast, director and crew of the new version are all English. But it did have American financial backing (American International Pictures) in common with the earlier film. Emily Bronte's novel was adapted by Patrick Tilley.

LEGION AUXILIARY MEETS

Mrs. E.S. Franklin and Mrs. Mayme Gentry entertained the Leslie Huddleston Unit 12, American Legion Auxiliary on Tuesday, January 19 in the Franklin home. Mrs. Joe Jones, president, conducted a business meeting.

Panama was selected as the topic for Foreign Relations study this year, and Mrs. M.M. McCloughan, chairman, will dress a doll in appropriate native costume. A project, "Pennies for Panama," was begun, aimed at helping to improve the living conditions through C.A.R.E.

A change was made in the by-laws to raise the dues from $2.75 to $3.50 and to add granddaughters to those eligible for membership. The group voted to assist the Junior members with a Valentine Sweetheart Banquet in February.

Since the number of delegates to Girls State from each town is based on Legion Auxiliary membership there, the quota from Hope has been raised from 12 to 14 due to increased Auxiliary membership. Mrs. McDowell Turner will serve as Girls State chairman this year. Miss Floyce Taylor, poppy chairman, recommended that 3,000 poppies be ordered for the spring sale. Cake and coffee were served for refreshments.

Commendation to Working Jew

MILWAUKEE (AP) — President Nixon has sent a White House certificate of commendation to Albert Rosen, a Jew who took over the Christmas Eve chores of a Gentile bartender so the latter could observe the holiday.

The example set by Rosen, a 52-year-old appliance store owner, was followed by others of his faith. A personal letter from the President said:

"The enclosed certificate is a token of my deep admiration and respect for your splendid service for others."

Hemline? You Decide Length

By JUDY LOVE

As you like it—knit or crochet a skirt that goes to all lengths for fashion.

Here's one of the most unusual and with-it items I've seen in some time. It's a skirt you either knit or crochet in a becoming A-line silhouette and you literally can work it as long or short as you wish. The secret is a clever series of tack-on tiers.

Basically, it's a neat little miniskirt (the kind you wear if you look like your youngest daughter, or else make it for her). Knit it on large No. 10 needles, or crochet it on a "J" hook. Either way, you can turn it out in a matter of hours. Then, you work two additional tiers or sections, to the length you prefer. These extra or additional sections are held securely to the basic short skirt by using snaps or velcro adhesive around the bottom of each tier.

The completed skirt looks lovely in every length and every size, including large. The shortest for fun, the mid-calf or midi for fashion,

The long and short of fashion—knit or crochet this ideal answer to the hemline question. Work it short, medium or all the way down. Clever tack-on tiers provide the exact answer for your length mood of the moment.

Let's see what we can do with the code word ARCH in order to make four hearts.

The lead is easy to Analyze. It is from a suit headed by the king-queen. Review of the bidding tells us West probably holds the ace of clubs in back of our king.

We need 10 tricks so we want to Count the losers first. We have to lose a spade and a trump. We can discard one club on dummy's third high diamond to leave us two potential club losers. Perhaps we can get rid of one of them on the dummy's diamonds. This will be easy if diamonds break 3-3, but the odds are that they will break

4-2. Can we make dummy's fifth diamond good?

It is possible if we have a little luck. We must start by retaining dummy's ace of spades as long as possible, so we let West hold the first spade trick.

Maybe he will shift to a club, but West just plays a second spade. Now we should be ready to operate.

We start by taking our ace and king of trumps. Both opponents follow and we are off to a good start. We can ruff our spade now, but we want to keep that third trump in dummy as an extra entry. So we cash the ace, king and queen of diamonds and discard one club. Now we lead and ruff a fourth diamond and things are really looking up. All we have to do is get to dummy for another club discard. We lead and ruff our last spade. East has to follow and we are able to lead dummy's last diamond and discard another club. We have lost only three tricks instead of four!

Very Few Can Understand Economy Claims

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Don't blame yourself for failing to understand the true condition of the economy. Even in the best informed circles, it appears, there is some confusion.

In December, the Commerce Department unveiled in its lobby a calculator with a mammoth signboard proclaiming the "growing" volume of the nation's output of goods and services.

The ceremony was accompanied by much fanfare. President Nixon was there and it was announced proudly that the Gross National Product had achieved a rate of $1 trillion a year, or that it had nearly doubled in 10 years.

But now the same Commerce Department has announced that while the calculator was busily adding up numbers for an impressionable audience, the actual size of the Gross National Product was falling, and at a shocking rate.

The calculator's figures included price inflation. The real GNP, with inflation removed, fell 3.3 per cent in the October-December quarter, the sharpest drop in 11 years.

Moreover, the GNP fell for the year by one-half per cent, the first decline for an entire year since 1958. In the final quarter of 1970, the real GNP was at an annual rate of $721.3 billion, rather than $1 trillion.

In counting inflation as part of the GNP, the producer of the calculator may be compared to a worker bragging that his paycheck is bigger every year because he has a cost-of-living clause in his contract, ignorant of the fact that his buying power remains the same.

YOUTH ASKED FOR IT!

This column is for young people, their problems and pleasures, their troubles and fun. As with the rest of Helen Help Us!, it welcomes laughs but won't dodge a serious question with a brush-off.

COMPLICATED QUESTION

Dear Helen:

I was his princess and he was my prince when I was in first grade and he in third.

Now I'm in seventh grade, and he's a ninth-grader, and he hardly ever notices me. If he wasn't too old for me back then, why is he now?

But if he is, then there's a cute boy in the eighth grade, and he has a brother in the same grade and they're both in the band, which I'm in, too. They like me.

But my prince is on the football team.

So please, what do I do? — LOVESICK

Dear Lovesick:

We-e-e—all—two birds in the band are better than an unnoticed football player in the bush, right? So keep the older "Prince Charming" in mind for high school (where Seniors often think sophomores are mighty cute) and concentrate on the cute guys who like you. — H.

Dear Helen:

I've been going with this guy who is 15 years older than me and married. He also has a family. We've been dating for 16 months and he plans to get a divorce and marry me.

Everything was great until my folks found out. They insisted that we break up, so I've been sneaking to see him. I truly love this man and know marriage will work, even though it will be tough if he has to support four children. Could you give some suggestions on winning my parents over? — NEEDING HELP, (18)

Dear N.H.:

You haven't even won ME over yet! ...Because:

1. A married man may date a younger chick for 16 months, but marriage usually isn't what he has in mind.

2. He has 15 years and four kids against him. (In addition to a wife!)

3. You are too young for this kind of involvement.

4. Your parents are right! — H.

Dear Helen:

I know a guy who is every high on anti-pollution, ecology, etc., and tootles around to every meeting in town, making big fusses about factory smog and water-pollution.

He doesn't seem to notice his old car pours out a blanket of smoke, and the blue haze is even thicker because he uses the cheapest gasoline on the market, plus he won't do any work on his car. (Doesn't have time, what with all the campaigning.)

It's sure funny how people can walk out of a pollution meeting and throw paper cups and trash on the floor, as they rap about how terrible "those others" are.

Or homeowners can be gung-ho for clean-ups and no-smoke legislation — until it's fall leaf burning time.

When will we ever learn? — OBSERVANT

Dear Ob:

...When "the other guy" teaches us, just as we're involved right now in teaching him. It takes time to change those easy, lifelong habits, but we must for, if we don't future generations may not survive. — H.

Time Is Healer of Infectious Polyneuritis

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Could you please answer some questions for me regarding the virus Guillain-Barre? The virus is named after two Frenchmen who discovered it. I had this virus, four weeks at home in bed, three weeks in hospital, four more weeks at home in bed. I was off work four months all together. This affected me in both feet and both knees and right hand and arm. The right hand and arm became thin. I am male, 36 years, never been sick before this. Can you tell me what caused this and what are the after-effects? My legs are tired most of the time and I have to rest often.

Dear Reader—Your story is not unusual for this disease. It goes by other names, such as infectious polyneuritis, meaning involvement of many nerves. Sometimes it is confused with polio. The truth is we don't know what causes it. Guillain and Barre did not describe a virus but the disease.

Polio commonly affects nerves by causing abnormal changes in the spinal cord. Polyneuritis affects the nerves just after they leave the spinal cord with similar effects. Swelling and degeneration of the nerve occurs and the muscles the nerves supply become weak or paralyzed. The legs are most often affected but the process may spread up the spinal column, picking up nerves to the rest of the body and affecting the arms as in your case. Rarely are facial muscles and eye muscles involved.

The muscle weakness and paralysis often begins without warning. There is no fever or other sign of illness. A few patients complain of muscle pain. Most patients do recall a mild respiratory illness two or three weeks before muscle involvement. This has caused scientists to think that it is a form of allergic reaction the body sometimes has to developing an immune response to an infection. We have a fancy term for this, "autoimmune mechanism." One literally becomes allergic to a natural reaction of the body building a defense against infection. The swelling and changes in the nerves in this instance is an example of the allergiclike response. Muscle involvement continues to a peak when all the muscles that are going to be affected have been. Then there is a plateau phase with few changes followed by rapid or gradual recovery. Sometimes maximum recovery is not obtained for months. Most people recover completely but about one in 10 continue to have muscle weakness. In this respect the outlook is far brighter than paralysis from polio.

There isn't any really good treatment. Good nursing care, perhaps hormones, time and hope are the best that can be offered. It sounds to me as if you have passed your peak problem and are well along the recovery phase.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Please send your questions and comments to Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D., in care of this paper. While Dr. Lamb cannot answer individual letters, he will answer letters of general interest in future columns.

Resurrection Flower

According to Christian legend, the resurrection flower sprang up wherever the Holy Family rested in their flight into Egypt. It is fabled to have blossomed at the Savior's birth, closed at the Crucifixion and opened again at Easter, whence its name of Resurrection Flower.

PERSONAL FINANCE

If you're a taxpayer, you have a friend in Congress—providing that you have upward of $30,000 a year of unearned income. This friendship may, indeed, relieve you of paying any taxes at all next year.

If you're a taxpayer of modest means who has been trying to lay up a bit of cash against the spectre of lean retirement years, things are different. You don't seem to have many friends.

There's a plot afoot to extract a few extra tax dollars from savings accounts that formerly allowed you to stretch the retirement buck just a little. And don't feel resentful. After all, the government has to make up somehow the money it's going to lose on those high-bracket types who are getting the tax relief they need so badly.

Let's take the good news first.

Until the Tax Reform Act of 1969 was passed, there was a good deal of grumbling here and there about well-heeled individuals who paid no income tax at all. This was possible if you arranged your investments carefully with regard to so-called "tax preference items," such as real estate deals, mines and oil wells, which produced tax-free income.

The 1969 act left such income tax-free up to $30,000, but on amounts over that there would be a "minimum tax" of 10 per cent. Thus, if you had $40,000 a year of income formerly tax-free, you would now have to pay almost as much tax as a 40-hour-a-week breadwinner earning $4.85 an hour.

This was obviously a gross injustice, and it has been remedied by Rep. Jack Miller of Iowa. As Congress was rushing to adjournment (debate limited to three minutes, no roll-call votes), his amendment to Sec. 301 of the tax law whizzed by.

It will enable some people with large tax-free income, especially from investments in mining, to return to the good old days of paying no income tax.

So much for the good news. Meanwhile, elsewhere in Washington, there were other people worrying about tax-deferred savings accounts.

Described several months ago in this column, these special accounts enable a person looking forward to reduced income in retirement years to sequester savings. No interest is paid out for periods up to 15 years. The tax ruling has been that since interest is not being received, it's not taxed until finally paid. If you defer it until after retirement, when you drop into a lower tax bracket, the interest when finally collected is taxed at a lower rate.

Everyone can't be perfect; someone has to be boss.

Hope Star SPORTS

Bobcats in Win Over Fairview

By BILL MOORE
Star Sports Writer

"It was a great experience," said head coach John Ross, after his Hope Bobcats took an early second half lead and then coasted by tenth ranked Camden Fairview, 69-53, in Jones Field House last night.

Playing on their home court, backed by members of the band, the cheerleaders, and most of all the students, the Bobcats won their third straight district game and now own sole possession of first place along with a 12-5 season record.

Starting out cold, the Bobcats could only get three points, all by John Dudley, as they watched the Cardinals build up an early 9-3 lead with 4:34 left in the first period.

After a Hope timeout, the Bobcats immediately started going to work.

Field goals by Dudley and Lynn Norton brought the Cats to within two, and after Parker Powell popped the net with 2:51 left in the first period, Hope had knotted the score at 11 all.

Dudley's two quick goals, while the Cardinals could only get a free throw, gave Hope a 15-12 margin at the close of the quarter.

Moving into the second quarter the Bobcats were outscored 17-13, and trailed at halftime, 29-28.

Fairview came back to tie the score at 22 all and then went ahead till the second half on a free shot by Johnny Robinson with 39 seconds to play. Norton and Dudley kept Hope close.

In such a rough district game, and by review of the first half, the second half was sure to be a squeaker to the finish.

However, after taking the tipoff downcourt, the Bobcats got the lead back for good on two charity throws by Powell, with only 19 seconds played.

Combined inside and outside shooting by Dudley and Briggs gave Hope a 39-31 margin, and as soon as Steve Harris hit a layup with 4:29 left, Fairview took a time out.

Norton and Dudley proceeded to keep the Cats moving and with just three seconds to go in the third quarter, Norton hit five three point plays to send Hope into a 50-36 stretch.

Starting the scoring in the last period, Norton hit a free throw with only six seconds played. Briggs then added four straight charity throws to put the Cats on the long end of a 55-40 score.

Ronnie Massanelli and Briggs then hit free throws for two more points and continued to handle the basketball, throwing to each team member so as to run out some time.

Pipping the netstring from 20 feet out at the side, Briggs helped to get a 67-47 Hope lead, and 36 seconds later Charles Frazier came in to wrap up the scoring with a pair of charity shots.

Actually, the key to the Bobcats' success was their outstanding defense, that kept rebounding, forcing outside shots, hurried throws, and stole quite a few passes.

For the night, Dudley hit 30 points, Briggs sacked 14, Norton ripped 13, and Powell had six.

Next Monday, the Bobkittens and Kittycats travel to Springfield and the Bobcats and Ladycats go to Ouachita the following night for a couple of real battles.

Delight Takes Ladycats at Tournament

By BILL MORE
Star Sports Writer

Although taking an early lead last night, the Hope Ladycats could not pull a victory out and bowed to the Delight Lady Dogs, 67-52, in the Gurdin Invitational Tournament.

Now, with a 6-9 overall record the Ladycats will travel to Ouachita Tuesday.

Taking the first quarter tipoff, Hope drove to the goal and immediately scored on a hook shot by Dee Singleton.

Singleton rifled in two more field goals and Betty Rodden later hit two, as the Ladycats held a 12-11 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Although again getting possession of the ball first, Hope couldn't score and shortly after the exchange, Delight took the lead for good.

Led by Gwynn Price, the Ladydogs began to pull away and led at halftime, 28-21.

Janet McCain proceeded to hit six points in that quarter, the last coming from an outside set shot with 27 seconds left.

Moving back to within four points on shots by Rodden and Singleton, Hope took a time out with 4:54 to go, after a minute of confused scrambling for the ball.

Later, with six seconds left, McCain hit a layup to pull Hope back to within four, 40-36.

Entering the fourth quarter, only Singleton could hit the net for the first couple of minutes. Rodden later hit six points to pull Hope to within two, 46-44, with 4:37 remaining in the game.

However, disaster struck at that point, with only eight more points for the Ladycats being scored while Delight hit a whopping 12.

Rodden had 24 points for the Ladycats, Singleton hit 15, and McCain had 13.

Bobkittens Beaten by Fairview Jrs.

In the earlier game the Hope Bobkittens were beaten by the Fairview Junior team 45 to 34. With two minutes gone out of the first quarter, John Bore of Fairview hit a jump shot to give Fairview the lead for the rest of the evening.

Using some keen shooting and fancy ball control the Fairview Junior team was never in danger. Strickland, of Fairview, led all scores with 21 points. Rhodes led Hope with 10 points, followed by Smith with 8.

SPORTS SHORTS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The Alabama International Motor Speedway at nearby Talladega said Thursday that because of "the current economic squeeze" some ticket prices will be lower during the 1971 racing season.

"Many of the seats that were $25 will be $10, and $15 and $20 under our new price structure," General Manager Don Naman announced at a news conference.

ONCE UPON A TIME pants were straight, both in cut and design. Now they are flared, in sports and on the street. Bob Smith (left), pro tour golfer, wears a flashy pair of slacks as he tees off, and Bob Nash, University of Hawaii basketball player, does not allow his green, flowery-patterned shorts to interfere with his free-throw attempt.

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

NEW YORK — (NEA) — What turns people off about Dave Meggyesy right away is the way he looks. The hair strings down over his ears almost shoulder length and flops over his right eye, old Veronica Lake style. The beard hides classically handsome features. The shirt would go well in Oregon woods. Faded jeans and untanned boots complete the ensemble.

What turns them off even more is the thrust of what he says—that football, the playing of middle America, is a microcosm of all that's wrong with society. Dave, of course, said it in a controversial book, "Out of Their League." And he continues to say it publicly to anybody who'll listen.

But the odd thing about Dave Meggyesy is that, although he spurned the sport in which he made his living for seven years, at the peak age of 29, he can't turn himself off completely from its appeal.

"It's something you've done all your life," he says now, "and there is that attachment in performance. To be candid about it, I have thought of playing again. There was a dead time between when I finished the book and began to have to relate to it. I began to think, 'Could I go back?' And, 'How could I go back?' Working it through in my mind."

Essentially serious, he'll twinkle a little smile to confess he has fudged and sneaked a look periodically at pro football games, in person and on television, and most recently the Super Bowl.

"Having played in the league," he says lightly, "you're always aware of other linebackers. You watch guys playing that same position. You think, 'Man, if I were traded, I could make that play.' Or that guy's good. I've come to appreciate Chuck Howley's play, for example." (Howley is the right linebacker, Dave's old position, for the Dallas Cowboys.)

And he also appreciates the mental gymnastics that can be a part of football.

"In 1966," he muses, "when Chuck Drulis was the defensive coach of the St. Louis Cardinals, you could see his mind working. He was creative. He'd use the five-man line—not get stuck to the standard 4-3—with Joe Robb at end dropping off. It was really an exciting thing to be involved with that. Football has qualities of human chess.

"I really appreciate Drulis as a logician. Here's a guy who's confronted with a problem — the problem is Sonny Jurgensen — so, solve it. I really have a fairly high regard for Drulis as an intelligent and creative man."

The significant point here is that when racial tension on the Cardinals was exposed a few years ago, Drulis was targeted as the chief culprit and apologized to the squad.

The defensive philosophy of the Cardinals changed in 1968, when Dick Voris joined the staff.

"Now we're going to play a 4-3 defense," mocks Meggyesy. "Linemen will stand with your feet this distance apart. Linebackers, you will be end over in this stance. Your keys will be thus and thus and thus. I found it frankly very easy to play. One of the factors in '68, when I had a good year, was not thinking."

"I got in this hassle with Voris in '69 when we're playing Minnesota. They were going down the field, running '17' slants on us. On goal line defenses we used to have an option 'slice' call. Larry Wilson, the safety, and I would reverse assignments. Larry would pinch inside, and I'd go across the field and take the lead back blocking. Larry filled in, and there'd be the ball carrier."

"Now it was third down on the 1-yard line. Larry and I turned to each other and said simultaneously, 'Let's slice it.' We made the play and they didn't score."

"The next Tuesday we thought we're really going to get a pat on the butt for thinking on our feet. Voris is running the film and stops it at that play. He says, 'What the hell is that?' He picks up the notebook dramatically, leafs through the goal line defenses and says, 'I don't find that in my notebook.'"

"I said, 'It's a slice call.' 'A slice call? I don't see any slice call.'"

"At that point, I'm intimidated by the whole scene. I look to Drulis and Wilson and they're not going to say anything. The whole point of it was we're being chewed out. And they said, 'Meggyesy, you think too much. Play the goddam defenses the way they're in the book.'"

Mother of 2 Is Hooked On Racing Motorcycles

By ERNESTINE GUGLIELMO

NEW YORK — (NEA) — About four years ago Sammie Dunn tried out a boy friend's motorcycle, and from that time on she has rarely gotten off.

Sammie Dunn is 25 years old, a mother of two girls, a full-time secretary in the evenings and, by popular consensus, a doll. She is also a professional motorcycle racer—a good one.

More women are taking up motorcycle racing as a hobby than ever before. But most remain in the female division, called "powder puff," in which they use the smaller bikes (under 125 cc). Sammie, however, is running alongside men on her 500 cc Triumph.

Sammie is trying hard to establish her reputation as a talented motorcyclist by entering as many big races as she can. She recently became the first woman to climb the Matterhorn, an extremely difficult hill at Saddleback, Calif.

A $100 prize awaited the first girl to make the hill. Waiting her turn with 25 guys who were also entered, Sammie said, "I looked at that hill. It was about 3,000 feet of solid rock. What was I doing there? But then my turn came, No. 24, and I knew."

She reached the top of the hill on the first run. Only three guys made it at all.

How do men react to her competing against them? "I don't compete against men," she said. "I love racing and winning is only part of the fun."

The woman behind the racing gear wears all her make-up, including false eyelashes while riding. "I think of myself as a woman on as well as off the motorcycle," said Sammie. "And I like to look nice even while I'm racing."

"A skilled and practiced person handling the bike eliminates some of the so-called danger. For racing isn't any more dangerous than trying to cross the street in N.Y."

She considers herself "cautious" as a racer and tries not to think of the danger while on a course. "If I avoided everything that involved taking risks, I'd be bored stiff."

Because her secretarial duties at an aircraft plant in Long Beach, Calif., are primarily at night and races are scheduled far apart, she has plenty of time to spend with her two daughters, Susan, 8, and Dawn, 6. They already know how to handle their mother's bike. But the two girls close their eyes when someone crashes and get very upset when their mother happens to be the one.

Yet Sammie has been what she considers "lucky" in her crashes. Her most serious accident involved an injured leg and put her on crutches for only two weeks.

Her goal is to become a stuntman, or more accurately a stuntwoman. Sammie feels she's had enough experience to qualify.

"After the number of crashes I've had, I've learned to crash with class."

Laver: Bad News For Competitors

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—And, finally, in the last cadenza of the practice session, in the way a champion prize fighter thrums the speed bag, Rod Laver asked his teenage mate if he'd throw some lobs for the final five minutes of the hour.

Laver became a ruddy blur and chased what seemed like a thousand tennis balls in every corner of the court at once.

The game is a business with Laver, and even in practice his concentration is deep. Last year he made over $200,000 in tournament prize money. This year he may even make more. He says that practice is work, but that he enjoys his work and that he cannot afford to slouch any time he grips a racket in his freckled fingers.

"That would be bad business, wouldn't it?" he asks rhetorically.

He has opened defense of his title in the Tennis
